Excerpt from Sketch of the Geological History of Lake Lahontan, a Quaternary Lake of Northwestern Nevada The rivers of the Great Basin are not all perennial; some of them disappear before the heat of summer. In the streams that are perennial a high percentage of the annual discharge is crowded into a brief space toward the end of the rainy season. Thus the arteries of this parched and heated country make but one feverish pulsation in a year. The streams usually diminish in volume as they descend into the valleys, and in many instances their waters are lost on the thirsty deserts and their channels run dry. In general they are larger near their sources than at their mouths. Commonly, too, instead of being pure, sparkling waters, refreshing to the lips as well as the eye, they are heavy with sediment and bitter and alkaline to the taste.
