Excerpt from Address Delivered Before the American Academy of Dental Science, at Their Eleventh Annual Meeting: Held in Boston, Oct. 30, 1878 In asking me, Who am not a dentist, to speak to you, you have determined beforehand, for yourselves, the subject of this annual address. You doubtless thought that, as it is my duty to watch the condition and Observe the methods of professional education in general, and to study the means by Which the liberal professions have been recruited, organized, and invested with dignity, my experience might enable me to make some useful suggestions concerning dental education and the means of improving the state of the profession of dentistry. At any rate, these topics are the only ones which my training and occupation fit me to treat before a body like this; so that your expectation and my desire to be of some service, however slight, to the Academy and the profession, both point to the same themes.
