Design and Development of Network Protocol in FPGA

By Dembrani, Mahesh / Patel, Vinit

Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | The increasing popularity of the Internet stimulates an explosive growth of the data transmitted on the Internet as well as the dramatic increase of the transmission speeds. As a result the TCP/IP processing has become a bottleneck. Traditional software based TCP/IP processing on general purpose processors (GPPs) is no longer able to keep pace with network wire speeds. Consequently, there is an urgent need to design performance-critical TCP/IP functions as special units to accelerate the processing speeds and to offload the processing tasks from GPPs. Such functional units performing micro-level functions can be implemented on field - programmable gate arrays (FPGAs.) FPGAs as programmable hardware devices are particularly suitable to encompass both high processing speeds and flexibility to meet the quickly changing Internet. A challenge in designing the TCP/IP function is that the demand for advanced services requires the network devices to support a wide range of application and protocols; however this application and protocols are constantly evolving. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 102 gr | 220x150x3 mm | 56 pp.
