HOPPING: THE HIDDEN LIVES OF AN EAST END HOP-PICKING FAMILY

Condition: New. For more than a century, hopping was the main event in the East End calendar ? an annual expedition of more than 200,000 East Enders to the countryside to pick hops and strip bines. For Aunt Daisy, to be away from the hustle and grime of the city and lose herself in the open spaces and pollen mists of the Kentish summer provided a succour that would last her through the long winters back in London. This annual escape helped to buffer her from life's difficult realities. Thoughtful and beautifully rendered, Hopping captures the essence of ordinary family lives through the extraordinary period of two world wars, bearing the hardship with fortitude and longing for those brief moments when they could escape. . . a book of astonishing empathy, eloquence and understanding. GUARDIAN.
