Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In the Tibetan Book of the Dead there is an explanation of what happens to a soul traversing from one incarnation to the next. The soul goes into what is called the Bardo, loosely translated as The In Between where the soul travels for seven weeks-forty-nine days-while Buddhist monks chant in an effort to guide the soul on its journey. The purpose of the chants is an attempt to encourage the soul to accept one of the several Heavens offered to it at various stages along the way. But if that does not happen, or cannot happen due to the need to balance out the positive and negative forces of karma left over from the actions and consequences in prior lives, the soul at the end of the Bardo is given the choice to accept any one of several couples for parents in its next life time. The soul sees all of those potential parents making love and the sexual magnetic energy is overwhelmingly strong. Still, the soul is encouraged, per the book and chanting monks, to be...
