Mallee act; and there have been reserved or alienated, less forfeited lands, 22, 489, 383 acres, leaving an area open for selection, including mountain forest lands, of 15, 613, 664. NEW SOUTH WALES. The free selection of Crown lands before survey was introduced into New South Wales by the Crown lands alienation act of 1861. This act, with those amending it, was eventually repealed in 1884, when the act was passed which, with certain amendments, sets forth the present condition of the land laws in that colony. By this act of 1884 the whole of the colony was divided into three great divisions, called the Eastern, Central, and Western divisions, respectively. For the purpose of administration of this act, these divisions are again divided into land districts, each district having a local land board that hears applications for land under the act; appeals lie from the decisions of local land boards to the Minister of Lands, whose determination is final. The land in the Eastern and Central divisions is open for conditional purchases in blocks of from 40 to 2, 560 acres. The conditions under which purchases of these blocks may be effected are, that 2 shillings per acre shall be paid on application; the purchaser to fence the boundaries within two years, and reside for five years on this land. The balance of the purchase money is payable at 1 shilling per acre annually, such payments to commence after three years from the application. At...
