Excerpt: . . . were born and begotten ruma ka tee ka tata que cha of our mothers, of our fathers, so they relate. Hence the singular fact that the bat is ascribed to the first Tonalamatl quarter, therefore to the East, is simply explained by the circumstance that the bat was set apart to represent the first of the four quarters within the region of the West, within the region of the Evening Star. I must decline to enter further into the symbolism of these figures, nor do I think it necessary, since for the other figures and the other animals the relation to the quarters of the heavens is clear, for them the combination seems natural with the heavenly quarters for which they were the chosen images. This holds undoubtedly for the jaguar and Mixcouatl and the North, as also for the quetzal bird and Xochipilli and the West. For the West is indeed the region of water, of costliness, of bloom, of increase, and the home of the maize. But it holds presumably also for the eagle and the South, since the eagle is the emblem and image of the warriors, while the South is the scorching, the fiery region. Thus after the first twenty-three sheets of our manuscript have exhibited the calendar proper, and after the six sheets have dealt with the four and the five regions of the world, Sheets 24-27, where for the second time the Tonalamatl appears distributed to the four...
