David Fickling Books, 2017. Hardcover. Condition: New. 1st Edition. First edition, first printing. SIGNED to title-page. Pullman's fascinating and eagerly-awaited volume of essays on story-telling. This is the trade edition and has already made itself a rather scarce signed first in this format. The simultaneously released signed limited edition appears to be relatively more plentiful by comparison. Very Fine indeed. Issued without dust-wrapper but in strikingly conceived red boards bearing John Lawrence's fine depiction of Pullman's own daemon, the jackdaw. The collector should be aware that as the book was issued jacketless it is especially vulnerable to attracting all manner of minor blemishes which will affect its value. This copy is absolutely immaculate and without detraction. Supplied here with the related promotional chapbook, an essay called "Imaginary Friends", that is included in the book but was actually released separately in advance of publication. Book and chapbook ideally suit each other. A fine pairing of a striking and essential Pullman. Recommended. D. B. Waters Rare Books: Established (1998) professional and full-time booksellers of fine, select 1st editions only. All stock is fully guaranteed as authentic. A small sample of our stock is presented here on this website. We never stock any first edition that is devalued by either price-clipping, dedications, owner inscriptions or other serious flaws.
