Excerpt: .the respect of the public for obstetrical care and obstetrics in general will be held in higher esteem by physicians themselves. As a result of all this, there will be fewer stillborn children, fewer mothers sacrificed, and the number of invalids following neglected labour will diminish markedly. Inasmuch as most obstetrical cases must be attended by the general practitioner--and then frequently in communities where no hospital exists--it will become necessary to establish local hospitals where the physician may send his patient to have the Twilight method administered by a nurse or physician trained in this method. When the time of delivery approaches the physician may be notified so that he may deliver the child in the hospital. This seems to me the practical solution of the problem of how the large mass of the population is to receive the benefit of Twilight Sleep, for,...
