He gave pretty near his whole attention for the passage of the Wailes claim, which gave Florida what was due her by the general government. Now since I have been here I have been asked a good many things about the Wailes claim, and was asked to put nothing in my book about it. I knew Colonel Wailes in Washington. I knew, through Colonel Henderso , that he had a contract from the State to get the State this money, and I helped him. I am not here as a citizen of the State to say whether he was entitled to the full amount or not, but what the State gave him as part payment was an acknowledgment of the debt, the Legislature allowing him a certain amount for his work, but did not give him the full amount he claimed. This broke his heart, and the State bears the blame. Now, speaking of Mr. Mallory, who is dead, he was a typical Southern gentleman, and really worth talking about. Mr. Mallory was looked upon in Congress and in the U. S. Senate, as one of the brightest men Congress had. As I say, he was a typical Southern gentleman, ever willing to help a friend, and highly honored by those who knew him. This, what I say about him, I know to be true. Now, as I go along in my remarks, I fancy I...
