Making Lemonade with Ben: The Audacity to Cope

By Katherine J Perreth

Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 413 pages. This award-winning tale of triumphant woe chronicles the spiritual, mental, emotional, and physical effects on a family after seven-year-old Ben is found in a coma. Despite Bens ensuing struggles with myriad disabilities and mental health issues, love wins. Narrated with irrepressible humor by the quirky mom, the story follows parallel tales of sixteen years of trauma and victory, culminating with Bens invitation to Washington DC. This inspiring book explores issues of global significance surrounding a family suddenly presented with a special needs child. At age seven, uber-outgoing Ben experiences myriad disabilities, mental challenges, and later, mental illness. The author candidly portrays her own deep struggles with what Bens life requires of her, and the roles of various communities in Bens recovery, including medical, educational, faith, governmental, and cross-cultural. In addition, the author celebrates the good created in Bens life because of his connection to Yahara House, an internationally accredited mental health treatment and recovery Clubhouse in Madison, and an intentional employer, the Madison Childrens Museum. Bens perpetually cheerful, never-say-die attitude brings him recognition. In 2011, the museum hires Ben, and then selects him as Community Member to accompany staff to Washington DC. There...
