The Department of Agriculture reported the largest number of employees in the District of Columbia, the number being 4,115, and this department had appointees from every state and territory except Alaska. The Department of the Interior proper, which reported the next largest number, was the only office that had one or more appointees for every state and territory. WHEKE EMPLOYED. The distinction between the employees in the District of Columbia and elsewhere has been preserved whenever practicable in presenting these statistics by classifying the employees of each department, bureau, or office, in the manner explained on pages 10 to 14. The reports from which the data were compiled show also the state and the city in which each employee was located on July 1, 1903. The tabulation of this data, however, developed such detail that it was not practicable to make a more elaborate presentation. PERIOD OF SERVICE. Under this title are presented statistics concerning the number of years that the employees were in the Executive Civil Service prior to July 1, 1903. It was intended that employees should report the total period of their service, whether continuous or intermittent, or whether in one branch of the service or several, but this intention seems not to have been clearly understood. There were doubtless many who reported the length of service in the position occupied at the time the report was made. Statistics concerning length of service are presented in connection with those relating...
