Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Equatorial Guinea tourism adventure. Equatorial Guinea is a squarish country on the Atlantic coast, situated between Cameroon and Gabon. It s got that bustling African tropics feel, has some stylish Spanish architectural influences and is pretty much in shape with an admiration by tourist community. The mainland constitutes most of the land area, but the island of Bioko boasts some delightful attractions. The island s volcanic landscape makes for a beautiful backdrop, as well as excellent hiking opportunities. The biggest town, Malabo, affords an energetic nightlife - there s just something about the combination of tropical weather, African culture and Spanish flavours that makes for a great night. The mainland (known also as Rio Muni) has less stunning features, but has all the good beaches, as well as a large wildlife population. For those who relish new experiences, Equatorial Guinea offers a true adventure. On Bioko Island you will find volcanic views, rainforests full of endangered primates and shores of nesting sea turtles. The capital city is Malabo, based in the island region of Bioko. It has retained much of its colonial-era architecture, with historical buildings including the former Palace of the Government, cathedral, City Hall and Casa Verde.
