Excerpt from Brown Waters, and Other Sketches: Mist-wreathed lakes, with the white throat piercing the dawn; or dark under the noon-day breeze; or flaming to the western sky: the many-noted murmur of water running swiftly over little stones: dim thunder of rapid, swelling and dying: sweet breath of a clean and wholesome world. These kind memory brings to us, - with the very feel of the air, the winds caress, the sound of its going in the trees. Beneath the snows of full thirty winters, but not buried too deeply for a swift resurrection, lies that evening when you fished on and on, till the glow faded above the northern hills and the river lost shore-lines in the dusk.
