Excerpt from The American Journal of Insanity, 1862-3, Vol. 19 To whatever extent we fall short of restoring our patients to sound health of body, to a similar or greater extent will mental recovery fall short. Constant and exact observation of the general health of the incurable insane, and a rigid investigation of the diseases under which they finally succumb, must be of high importance to us, in enabling us in numerous instances to detect those negations of curability, which ultimately interpose their veto upon all our hopes and promises. We have become familiar with several physical complications, whose detection even at the very outset of insanity, or before mental aberration has yet been evinced, proclaim to us but too unmistakably, the utter hopelessness of the cases in which we observe them general paralysis, epilepsy, injuries of the brain, advanced organized lesions of the heart, the lungs, or of any other important organ, hardly fail to assure us of the incurability of their associated mental disease. It would seem but little to affect our prognosis whether the brain itself - that organ to which we are wont to ascribe immediate or sole mental sovereignty - is or is not directly implicated; its functional integrity, whether primarily or only by reflex agency, impaired, will not be reconstructed so long as any lethal condition exists in any other important part of the system. Of all the morbid complications of incurable insanity, none is perhaps more extensively present, or more certainly fatal, than pulmonary tubercular phthisis. Esquirol estimated that in one out of every four persons becoming insane, thoracic disease exists. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of...
