V Held at Richmond, Va; June 1, 2, 3, 1915 Mr. Commander and Comrades: I have been assigned the very pleasing duty to address you at this hour, giving in condensed outline the character of the soldier we admire, the statesman we venerate, the Christian we emulate, the patriot without compare, the man we love, the President we adore - Jefferson Davis. Would this duty had been assigned to abler hands, but I yield nothing to others who would do homage to his memory. I cannot hope to add anything to that which has been well said by his many friends. The question which confronts me is what I shall leave unsaid. His life and record is not only well known to you and to America, but is of international fame and interest; yet I would offer my tribute, however small. I cannot in the limited time assigned me undertake to give even an outline of his life, but must confine myself to a presentation of the splendid character he achieved and which stands out on the horizon of American history as our wonderful mountains along the Western coast, in silent greatness and rugged grandeur, attracting the attention and commanding the admiration of all who behold. General Bennett H. Young in an address at New Orleans, summing up the life of Jefferson Davis, uniquely said: The soldier, 1828 to 1835. The planter, 1835 to 1845. The statesman, 1845 to 1846. The soldier again, 1846 to 1847. The Senator, 1857 to 1861. The President, 1861 to 1865. The prisoner, 1865 to 1867. The martyr and victim of persecution as the representative of...
