There is no question that Nigeria exists as both a legal entity and a physical entity. It has defined geographical boundaries (although it occasionally gets into disputes regarding these boundaries). The country is recognised as a territorial-State by the United Nations and therefore has legal globally acknowledged Sovereign status. The problem of Nigeria therefore - it is a problem of rather than a problem with - is as simple as to ask if Nigeria the legal entity is a geo-social reality within its geographical expanse that is undisputed. Nigeria is today continued in name, and by this fact we are introduced to the Nigerian ingestion of the Western worldview. If the Westerner designed Nigeria the way it had then the Westerner had superior reason to do so. If the Westerner gave a certain geographic construction the name Nigeria then the Westerner had superior justification for choosing the name, never mind that the name was invented. The West as the Superior is so...
