AuthorHouse. Paperback. Condition: New. 196 pages. Dimensions: 8.1in. x 5.0in. x 0.6in. Making It Happen is a teenage novel about three urban high school students from Washington, DC. The story begins with strong details of Renees struggles to overcome harsh family issues and her incredible ability, to maintain her grades as a senior on the honor roll. Her elderly grandfather raised her and made sure that she had an understanding of his expectations about how important it was for them to respect and communicate with each other daily. Renee has two close friends who are doing quite well in school as well, Vicki and Shawny. Unlike Renee the two girls have their parents in their lives. Though different yet quite the same, Vickis parents are her big brother and their Auntie. (They were the ones who raised her) Her parents were drug addicts. She constantly witnessed her filthy dope fiend parents, scheming their way through several drug-stripes throughout the neighborhoods where she hung out and from time to time, shed say a couple of jokes about them or to them as she passed them by. Shawny on the other hand, her parent were high school sweetheart who grew up in the...
