CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 268 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in. A woman stands naked, silhouetted against a window in a purple room. It's the only memory Sergio has of the week leading up to the accident that almost killed him when he was scuba diving off the Tuscan coast. He remembers nothing else about that woman, but the love he feels for her will drive him to delve into the mystery surrounding those days that are missing from his memory. The Purple Room is a magnetic and gripping psychological drama, but filled with those moments of bittersweet comedy, misunderstanding and heartbreak that all too often punctuate every search for a partner. Sergio's is a journey of self-discovery, in which a deep and uncompromising self-awareness goes hand in hand with the universal desire to find someone to love. Winner of the Carver Prize and Carlo Cassola Prize for Literature. EDITORIAL REVIEWS Intense and moving. Delicate like the touch of cotton sheets in the summer. A page-turner, kidnaps the reader with impeccable style and storytelling worth a prize. - Booksblog Casiraghis style is smooth, tight and spare. Il Corriere della Sera A deeply human journey, both painful and magnetic. () A bittersweet ending which leaves you with food for thought and a half-smile on your face. DG MAG A craftily-woven plot that sucks the reader in with the pace of a psychological thriller, for such becomes Sergio's life, filled with questions, traps, revelations, all leading to the final discovery of oneself. Stilos The story unfolds in a gripping and suspended atmosphere, where euphoria, desperation and self-doubt come together in equal measure () Casiraghis novel is like a mirror where, beyond the twists and turns of the plot, the reader finds another tale...
