However, it is only in water-laid or wind-laid unconsolidated sediments containing substantial amounts of sand-sized grains that heavy minerals are at all likely to occur in amounts and physical form suitable for commercial extraction. Gravel deposits as well as sand deposits are possible heavy mineral sources because many gravel deposits contain much sand-sized material. Sand and gravel deposits are found along the Wabash River in the alluvium deposited by the river in post-glacial times, in glacial outwash, and in sand dunes (fig.
