Excerpt from Apostolic Preaching: A Sermon Delivered in the Wesleyan Centenary Chapel, Boston, February 6th, 1842 First, then, we observe, that the Apostles preached not themselves. The great philosophers of Greece set up various schools of learning, to teach their peculiar tenets, and gave their own names to the moral doctrines taught in those seminaries. They might truly be said to preach themselves to their pupils, as they claimed the credit of forming their systems of morality, and because the system of philosophy which prevailed in each school here the name of its founder for centuries. Not so, however, the apostles of our Lord. They did not set themselves forth as some great ones, the originators of a school of moral philosophy, to whom belonged the honour of introducing and establishing Christianity in the world. The religion they taught was founded by Jesus Christ, their great and divine Master; they were his disciples, publishing his doctrines, enforcing his precepts, establishing his authority, and seeking his honour. They sought not their own glory, but the glory of Him that sent them. They were jealous...
