Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Mireille: An Opera in Three Acts The Opera of Mireille is founded on a French poem, called Mireio, written originally in the Provençal dialect by Mistral, a native of Maillaine, in that province. At the commencement, Mireille (the daughter of Ramon, a wealthy farmer) is discovered in a mulberry plantation, surrounded by the neighboring village girls, who, after singing a chorus of a pastoral character, rally her on her affection for Vincent (a handsome but poor young basketmaker), whom, in the pure simplicity of her heart, the young girl ingenuously admits she devotedly loves. Taven (a reputed witch), seeing the improbability of Ramon's consent being obtained, advises caution; but the appearance of Vincent dispels all fear and doubt, and the first act concludes with their mutual expression of undying love. The second act opens with a chorus and dance, in the Arena of Ar es, at which is assembled a crowd of citizens and peasants, and where Vincent and Mireille again meet for a time, but are separated by the rest of the crowd attending the sports. Taven warns Mireille that she has overheard Ourrias (a wild herdsman) express to his companions his love for her, and she is shortly after, when alone, surprised by his appearing and advocating, though unsuccessfully, his suit, having previously obtained her father's consent - to whom he reports his repulse. Ambroise (the father of Vincent and Vincenette), a poor and honest peasant, attended by his children, waits on Ramon to solicit his consent to the union of the lovers, but meets with a stern refusal, and is upbraided with having mercenary motives, when Mireille, who has overheard them, declares that she...
