Excerpt from The Colonial Virginian: An Address Delivered Before the Geographical and Historical Society of Richmond College October College, October 13, 1891 Mr. President, Ladies, and Gentlemen; The Geographical and Historical Society of Richmond College, at whose bidding I have the honor to be here, was happy, I trust, in the choice of its designation. It should be potential in its range of possibilities. It follows, emuluously it seems, other Virginian precursors of enlightenment. The original title of a dignified body, which I have for years striven to serve, was the Virginia Historical and Philosophical Society. It was organized December 29, 1831, with Chief-Justice Marshall as its first president. It is honored now in a triumvirate of directive officers, whom Richmond values for their excellences. The second of these is your own loved president, the chief herald of the cause of education in our teeming republic. The Hon. William Wirt Henry and Colonel Archer Anderson hold the first and third trusts. Since 1870 the essential exponent of our State has been known more simply as the Virginia Historical Society, having relegated then philosophy to the dreamer. It had a predecessor in imposing name more than half a century before - the Philosophical Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge instituted at the ambrosial capital of the Old Dominion - Williamsburg - in the month of flowers - May, 1773. I may recur to it again. Does not history repeat itself? A Virginian proclivity is reasserted in the name of your promising society. Constituted as you are of representatives of quite every county of our own State, and of many of the southern sisterhood; bouyed with the infectious ardor and activity of...
