Excerpt from A Carnival of Sports: An Entertainment Representing Such Popular Sports as Tennis, Archery, Base-Ball, Boxing, Foot-Ball, Etc King Carnival, seated on his decorated throne, in colors suitable for a gala-day, at the right of the stage, and holding a Silver trumpet and wand, calls for his subjects, who represent the various popular sports in turn. They advance to the sound of music, as summoned, bearing the implements of their respective games, first bowing low in obeisance to their monarch, and then advancing to the front of the stage and taking suitable positions for speaking. After delivering their messages they retire in a similar manner, after making homage to their king. King Carnival. In palmy days of old, when Greece and Rome held sway, athletic, manly sports engaged man's time and thought. Great Olympic games, the coliseum at Rome, and trials of speed and strength were what men talked about. Men feared not to shed blood; men wincing not when attacked; or pride in self-control and strength of frame ran high. Entertainment holds sway, and men refrain from scenes of ely and rage. But still men throng to see race of trotting stock, a soldier's grand parade, day of sports where men engage in trials of skill. This, here, is our attempt. We do not advertise show professional. We only bring to you few familiar sports as we can show them here. Game of tennis first we beg to introduce.
