Excerpt from Homes and Haunts of Edward Fitzgerald Originally a farmhouse, Fitz Gerald restored and added to it without destroying its character. Its fine barn was left standing, and on its eaves pigeons purple-breasted carriers, egotistical fantails, and meek brown nuns - cooed out their interminable affairs de caeur. Here in the shadow of green trees still slept its duck pond, provoking the remark, which amused Fitzgerald so much, of his old man-servant, delivered after deliberation, Well, them ducks du seem fond of the water, to be sure. Fitzgerald's home bore the clear impress of his individuality, of his love for Nature, of his clinging to associations for the sake of the past and for their own sake. Just as the barn was allowed to stand, kept in perfect order, so was left undisturbed the farm-kitchen, with its separate entrance, on a line with the porch of the front door, a kitchen wherein all things were kept by his little, active, elderly housekeeper, to a pitch of cleanliness and order that might be called painful. There lived cherished possession now, alas! Seldom to be found the little couple who, joint tenants of a china house, with a startlingly vermilion roof and spotless walls, so regulated their walks abroad that, with tender gallantry, the gentleman only braved the inclement weather, leaving to his lady, a matron of the sparest proportions, the delights of a promenade on a fine day.
