But as the average is brought to two places of decimals, what is to be deducted on that account A point, if the decimal exceeds half a point. But if the decimal is less than half a point, what is done f Then nothing is deducted but the whole number. When are the totals at the foot of the return to be inserted in ink When the Annual Practice Returns are to be prepared, when the information then given will apply to the effectives on that date. Who is to be held responsible for the correctness of this return The captain or officer commanding the company. Why Because it is the record shewing the progress and efficiency of every soldier of the company, and is liable to be called for at any moment. When a man is transferred to, or joins a company, while the annual course is proceeding, what is to be sent with him to his new company A memo, signed by the captain of the company, from which he is transferred detailing his performances. Where are these performances to be entered At the foot of the squad to which he is posted. When a man does not practise, how is this to be signified in the several columns opposite his name They are to be dotted through. When he has practised, and has not obtained...
