Aristippus and Hedonism. --Antisthenes and Cynicism. Enclides and the School of Megara 1. Aristippus of Cyrene 1 was a sensualistic Sophist before joining the Socratics, and adhered to the theoretical teachings of that school. With Protagoras, he maintains that all our knowledge is subjective, and that we cannot know what things are in themselves. He sharply distinguishes between the object of knowledge and Kant's thing-in-itself, that is, the external and absolutely unknown cause of our sensations (to which he refers as the ultimate aim of life). His ethics, too, is more in accord with the principles of Protagoras than those of Socrates. Pleasure is, according to him, the ultimate aim of life. Hence the name hedonism is applied to his doctrine, which must not, however, be interpreted as a coarse sensualism. He is a follower of Socrates and his moral principles on this important point, and demands, above...
