William McKinley, Jr., Of Ohio, in the House of Representatives, Wednesday, April 30, 1884 It is not because they are favorable to protection, even incidentally, that only 20 percent, reduction is proposed, but because believing this is all they can accomplish this year they invite all the friends of tariff reform to join them, with the assurance that next year and for the following years additional steps will be taken which will ultimately bring our tariff taxation to a strictly revenue basis; which means a tax upon tea and coffee and such other articles as we can not produce or manufacture in the United States, and the release of all others from customs duties. My distinguished friend, the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, shakes his head in disapproval of that proposition. Why, this theory of taxation is as old as the Democratic party, and in the Forty-sixth Congress my distinguished friend and colleague [Mr. Hurd] introduced into this House a joint resolution a copy of which I have in my hand - he one of the most conspicuous leaders of the free-trade party here to-day - and he distinctly declared in the ninth section of that joint resolution that to the end the present tariff shall become one for revenue Only the following changes should be made. 1. Upon all dutiable articles producing little or no revenue to the Government the duty should be returned to a revenue basis or they should be placed on the free-list. 2.The duty on tea and coffee shall be restored, And that is what a revenue tariff means. It means collection...
