Not illustrated. 1895 Excerpt: .even one person to this investigation, and the incomplete and sometimes doubtful character of many of our results is usually to be attributed to unavoidable interruptions of studies which should have been continuous. We have endeavored to investigate, so far as possible, the spontaneous prevalence of white muscardine in the field; to determine the cheapest, best, and most convenient method and apparatus for the artificial culture of the muscardine fungus and of some other fungi of similar habit; to bring into comparison inoculation experiments in the laboratory and the field with spores derived from such artificial cultures and similar experiments with those coming directly from the dead insect itself; and to test the economic value of various methods for the increase and extension of this muscardine in the field, either as a preventive measure when chinch-bugs are relatively few, or as a means of arresting their ravages when they are excessively abundant and destructive. Spontaneous Occurrence. Notwithstanding the prevalent drouths of 1891, 1892, and 1893, and the consequent absence of any considerable outbreak of contagious disease among chinch-bugs, as well as the failure of all our attempts at the artificial introduction of white muscardine in Illinois, a sufficient number of fungus-covered specimens were found from time to time in widely separated places, to show the presence of that disease in here and there a locality. Sporotrichum globuliferum seems, in fact, very commonly, if sparingly, present among insects in this latitude in a condition to give local..
