Not illustrated. 1867 Excerpt: .patting the trembling hands on her bosom, don t cry; we are not going to make you leave us, my darling; so go and do Mrs. Fry s ironing, for the flats are hot by this time. Nelly wiped her eyes, and after kissing Mrs. Edmonds several times, set about her task; whilst Mary from her arm-chair narrowly watched her, thinking of the many changes that had passed over herself and Jim, since they had adopted Charley and Nelly Carroll. If they brought hard work at first for us, thought the kind little woman, they brought the Lord s blessing also with them. I said they would, and they did; and now I wonder where a girl is to be found-to match with our Nelly? Tom Hopkins shows lds good sense in choosing Nelly. Nelly Carroll was a tall, fine, healthy girl, not really handsome; indeed,...
