Excerpt: . narrow neck of land, known by the name of the Deer This gentleman rode round Lough Neagh in the year 1804, for a considerable wager, which he performed in less than five hours, being a circuit of 80 miles, 6 5 furlongs, English measure. park-, is a beautiful sheet of water, of an oval form, Lough Beg, called Loughbeg, or the Little lake. This body of water covers 625 acres of land; and is stored with pike, bream, trout, perch, roach, eels, and a variety of wild fowl. An ingenious attempt to drain it was made about the year 174-0, by Arthur Dobbs, Esqfi then agent to Lord Conway. For this purpose he erected a windmill at the place where the isthmus between the lakes is narrowest; which acting upon buckets, threw the water into the other lake. In this way the lake was emptied; but the...
