Meditation is essential to the Catholic Way of life and this work will help accomplish this solemn task: THE parable of the lost sheep is a picture of man s helplessness when separated from God. The image of a sheep dependent upon its shepherd portrays the deep truth of man s need for God. The sheep out of the fold is a striking type of abject helplessness. Wandering perhaps in quest of richer pasture it loses itself-then the night comes on and the frightened animal gives utterance to its fear with a cry for help. It cannot help itself. It cannot know that with each step it is advancing deeper into the desert. It cannot tell for whom it is bleating. Its instinct urges it to seek the other sheep, whereas in this predicament only the shepherd can be of service. So is it with the history of man s soul. Entangled in the mazes of evil there must come to him a better moment when he knows that of himself he is helpless. He may not realize this at once. He may for a time blindly seek aid from men-as the blind instinct of the lost sheep sought the sheep and not the shepherd -but at last he awakens to the consciousness that when lost in the wilderness there is no relief found in himself or men, hut in God. Now, if man s help is from God alone, man becomes an occasion of God s accidental glory, and in a restricted sense we can say that God needs man. By the divine right of ownership we are the sheep of His fold. He will not-He cannot of...
