Excerpt from State and Federal Marketing Activities and Other Economic Work, 1936, Vol. 16 Under the new trade agreement between the United States and Switzerland, signed January 9, Switzerland agrees to extend benefits in the form of duty reductions, quota increases, and other assurances covering a number of important American agricultural products, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture; In 1929 Switzerland imported these products from the United States to a total value of This trade, largely because of increased import restrictions by Switzer; land, had declined to only in 1934. The department says that with gradual improvement in world economic conditions and particularly with improvement in Switzerland, our agricultural exports to Switzerland may be expected to climb toward the 1929 level. Secretary Wallace points out that Switzerland has retaliated strongly against agricultural imports from the United States because of increases in duties on Swiss products in the smoot-hawley tariff.
