DIGEST OF THE EVIDENCE OF EDWARDS BEFORE THE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEES OF 1849 AND 1850. But, besides the Libraries for the learned, and for those who aspire to become learned, other collections are needed for readers. of a class to whom such an ambition is unknown. And, in this path, Englishmen may fairly boast that they have rather set an example than waited to follow one. The task was not easy, but those who worked at it--with many shortcomings--had the one merit which often repairs defect, and ekes out small means, --they persevered, in spite of obstacles. --Libraries and Founders of Libraries. These Parliamentary inquiries must ever stand out as the charter of the public library movement. They may be ancient history now, but it is necessary for the sake of completeness to look closely at Edwards place in the work of the...
