Excerpt from The Experience, Prospects and Purposes of King s College, Fredericton: Oration Delivered at the Encaenia, June 26, 1851 When therefore I received from His Excellency Sir Howard Douglas, then in England on public business, my appointment to this College, I was informed that accommodation had been provided in the building for twenty Students. The number was much less than I had previously anticipated; but I was assured that more were not likely to apply for admission in the then existing state of the population of the Colony. On my arrival I found in fact but twelve actually assembled, to whom four were added during the first Term. The venerable gentleman, then as President administering the Government of the Province, congratulated however the General Assembly on this, as he was pleased to describe it, auspicious commencement; and the two branches of the Legislature responded to his view. Some few accessions were subsequently made but the experience of our first seven years indubitably proved that, although the College was then without the name or shadow of a rival, it had received its complement of ingenuous youth at that period requiring a collegiate education. E er long indeed a change in the commercial relations of the Colony, together with the reduction of the support affordedto the Clergy of the Church of England, an] the abrogation of its Divinity Scholarships, involved a painful diminution; while the members of other communions proceeded to estab lish their separate places of education which, although disclaiming any thing like unfriendly competition, could scarcely fail to intercept some who might otherwise have repaired to the Provincial University. Complaints were at the same time made, more especially by ministers and members...
