

Blue Money

By Susan Hubbard

University of Missouri Press. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Blue Money, Susan Hubbard, A union organizer returns to her hometown and her high school sweetheart, only to discover unexpected peril. A middle-aged man walks to meet his wife at work one day and loses her forever. A young writer's stage fright destroys her work and her marriage but offers her a new life. In "Blue Money," Susan Hubbard creates a world in which the most ordinary things can be magical, and the most ordinary people can be extraordinary. "Selling the House" is the enchanting story of Marianne, a young housewife whose life is altered forever by a mysterious stranger. He suddenly appears on her doorstep one morning, offers to buy her home, quotes poetry, and just as suddenly disappears. Marianne soon discovers, however, that the stranger wants more than her house he wants her. Although she does not accept the man's proposition, Marianne has been changed by it. His words echo throughout her life. "If she sometimes had trouble sleeping, if she spent more time reading poetry or staring out the window . . . well, those were small aberrations in an otherwise quite satisfactory life." Strangers appear and disappear...
