Capsule Summary: No one at Wahoo High School can stop playing a video game named O.P.M.

Some joke that it is as habit forming as opium. After all, what is more addictive than spending Other People's Money? Summary: Fifteen-year-old Tim Jacobson's life has been upended twice in the past four months: (1) The night his mom died. (2) The moment he typed in O.P.M. - or opium as the guys call it - is hard to resist. After all, what is more addictive than spending Other People's Money? Tim wants to impress Emma, the only classmate who is his equal in both brain-power and game-playing.

But he mistakenly believes that the only way to get closer to her is to befriend her pal Sami.

Heartbreak is guaranteed. Tim and Emma are modern kids with major problems. Tim's mother died recently; his father turned to alcohol and is now living in homeless shelters. Emma's dad left the house one day and never came back. She is gradually uncovering the reasons why, and all...
