

Death of a Matador

By Everett Powers

CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 374 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. In the dusty little Central California city of Stevinson, a matador enters a bullfight arena to face twelve hundred pounds of muscle and fury. He engages the bull and leads it through his cape with grace and flair, until his legs and arms go numb, he's been drugged. When his paralyzed arms drop the cape, the bull rams a horn into his liver and that's it for the matador. The killer didn't mean for the man to die, but oh well. He wasn't about to go to jail for it, though, so he tracks down the guy he paid to give the matador the spiked water, bashes him with a piece of rebar, and dumps him into a ditch. No witness, no jail. Imagine his surprise when his picture shows up in the paper later that week. Now he's gotta kill someone else. Instead of attending the bullfight, the mayor of Stevinson, Manny Dutra, is negotiating with pot growers who want to grow their quasi-legal product in his city. He squeezes three hundred grand out of them, a nice commission, but...
