Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: Chinese . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Homophones refer to two or more words which have the same pronunciation but the different character combination and different meanings; Homographs refer to two or more words which have the same Chinese character combination but with different pronunciation and meanings. In our daily work and study, if we don't pay attention to the difference between them, we may often get confused. Chinese homophones and homographs, in language practice, not only often affect the communication linguistic phenomenon, but also the difficulty of modern Chinese characters toning work. This book contains the world Contemporary Chinese homophones and homographs of modern Chinese multi-tone system research, comprehensive study of multi-tone character phenomenon, and creatively put forward the concept of Homophonic Phrases and Homographic Phrases and put forward in modern Chinese principles and methods of multi-tone character specification. 1. If the same word sound is corresponding to the same word homonym, it is considered as a homophone phrase. If the same word form is corresponding to the same word homograph, it is considered as a homograph phrase; 2. Between a homophone or homograph within the phrase, don't put a blank line; between different homophone phrase or homograph phrase, put a blank line; 3. All homophones and homographs are retrieved by the first character form and pronunciation.
