Howson's Offices, Forrest Place, 1231/4 South Fourth St., Philadelphia, With Introductory Remarks, Certificates, List of References, C The profession of procuring patents for inventions, is peculiar in many respects. The diversity of the titles assumed, and the variety of inducements held out by parties engaged in transacting business at the Patent Office, for the purpose of attracting the attention of inventors, are prominent peculiarities. The old-fashioned title of Patent Agent, appears to have been abandoned for the more ostentatious designations of Patent Attorney, Patent Solicitor, Counselor for Inventors, the somewhat quaint title of Counselor at Patent Law, and other terms of such a character, as to lead to the belief that we shall shortly hear of Patent Emporiums and Patent Depots. The inducements held out by agents for inventors, for the purpose of procuring business, are both numerous and peculiar. There are the circulars and advertisements of the firms who make an outcry about the...
