Excerpt from The Histopathology of Goitre: Based Upon the Microscopical Study of Over Fifty Cases of Thyroidectomy, With Histories of the Most Important Maccallum, of Baltimore, in a recent article on the pathology of exophthalmic goitre, describes certain histological changes in the thyroid gland which he regards as diagnostic of the disease. These microscopic changes he depicts as a budding or infolding of the acinal epithelium, together with certain alterations in the morphological character of the lining cells. His observations were made upon a number of cases of exophthalmic goitre, every one of them presenting the characteristic picture to a greater or less degree. Even in the very early stages of the disease the histopathological change could be made out in some part of the gland.
