AuthorHouse. Paperback. Condition: New. 296 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in. WWII Letters to My Girl Back Home is the unique story of a soldier from Muncie, Indiana who served as an Air Corps weather observer in West Africa and the Middle East. In letters written daily to his fiance, Sgt. Humbert reported not only his impression of the weathersmans life as it really was, but also candid observations of people and places in distant lands. Assigned to the 19th Weather Squadron in Cairo, small groups of 15-20 worked to supply critical weather information to pilots flying war material eastward across North Africa to the China- Burma-India theatre. Once their work shift was completed, they were free for the day. The sergeants duties took him to Lagos, Nigeria, once a center of the slave trade, to Masirah, a desert island off the coast of Arabia and to Ankara, Turkey. Flying 25, 000 miles, he visited Cairo several times, where he saw the Nile, the Sahara, the pyramids and sphinx, and the gold-covered treasures of King Tuts tomb. In a furlough to the Holy Land, he toured Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, the Sea of Galilee, Damascus and Syria. In Istanbul, famed Constantinople, once capital of the Roman Empire, he saw aqueducts, the fabulous Blue Mosque, the Bosphorus and the Church of St. Sophia which was old before Columbus set sail for America. Whether firing a 20 mm cannon on a Liberty ship, enjoying a storm at sea, hopping a moving train in Syria, or riding a camel, he took full advantage of many exciting opportunities. Each night he would write his girl, telling her what he saw, replying to her letters, reminiscing about their dates of long ago and their dreams of a future together, a future that did materialize, for 56...
