Excerpt from Knowledge and Illustrated Scientific News, Vol. 1: January to December, 1904 And not only did the scenery change as they drifted on, but the fiery heats of summer were succeeded by the violent autumn storms, and then the winter crept steadily and remorselessly on. The surface of the river one morning was Spangled with patches of ice. Then a fringe of ice crept out day after day further from the banks, and the air was full of murmurs from the grinding ice, but there was still time to go many miles before the passage was blocked completely by the ice. Then winter quarters were formed, and the caravan, which had made the long journey by land, was successfully joined. Never, writes Dr. Hedin, was a journey of that magnitude carried through so comfortably and so successfully. And we believe him, for with little danger and with no great difficulty for so resourceful and intrepid an explorer, 3. Thousand miles of a practically unknown river was most minutely investigated in the. Space of some three months. Dr. Hedin is not one to...
