JESSICA KINGSLEY PUBLISHERS, United Kingdom, 2000. Paperback. Condition: New. New. Language: English . Brand New Book. This book is based upon the author s attempts to explore how survivors of child sexual abuse, and mothers and teachers of such survivors coped in the aftermath of the abuse. The author adopted a qualitative approach by conducting interviews with seven adult survivors of child sexual abuse, seven mothers whose children had been sexually abused and 14 teachers who have had direct experiences of working with sexually abused children. The book does provide important insights for workers and agencies into the need for more proactive interventions to support the survivors, mothers and teachers who have had direct experiences of child sexual abuse. The important role of the education system in supporting families was reinforced by the study and this provides valuable support to the ongoing research into the potential roles of the education system in promoting child mental health. - Journal of Interprofessional Care What happens to the survivors of child sexual abuse in its aftermath? The author analyses these different and often conflicting perspectives, placing them in the context of the literature on coping with trauma,...
