The Entry into Jerusalem According to the Gospel of Luke, A Critical and Historical Re-Examination

By Christopher Naseri

Verlag Dr. Kovac, Hamburg, 2011. Softcover. Condition: neu. 1. Auflage. THEOS - Studienreihe Theologische Forschungsergebnisse, Band 93 308 pages. The account of the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem as narrated in the third Gospel (Luke 19,28-40) has its particular Lukan coloration that deserves to be explored. Many authors have in the past years made considerable contributions in this area, but most of these studies have been made mainly in relation to all the four evangelists. Important Lukan themes therefore still call for attention regarding the account: What is the importance of the sending of the two disciples for Luke who among the Synoptics is the only evangelist who records both the Mission of the twelve (9,1-6) and of the seventy(-two) (10,1-12)? What message does Luke convey in using the term ο` ku,rioj for Jesus in v. 31 and the same term in its plural form oi` ku,rioi for the purported owners of the colt in v. 33? Why is the crowd of those who acclaimed Jesus in v. 37 limited only to 'the multitude of disciples?' The particular addition in vv. 39-40 by Luke alone where Jesus is probably shown to be supporting his disciples requires consideration. My study of...
