Excerpt from The Character Guidance Instructional Program: A Monograph Presented to the Staff and Faculty of the United States Army Chaplains School Ideally the most effective means of reaching the greatest number of servicemen with moral teachings is the Character Guidance Instructional program. Perhaps the most desired means are the religious services and the personal work done by Chaplains, but due to time and other circumstances he reaches only a small percentage regularly of the troops assigned. It is further recognized that this type of contact is on a volunteer basis. The Character Guidance program reaches 85 more or less each month with moral instruction. If the Character Guidance instructional program is as important as it appears to be, and reaches the greatest number of service men, then the Chaplaincy at all levels should devote a madman amount of effort and interest in this program. It is of prime importance that every chaplain be at his best personally and have at his disposal the best equipment, command support, and subject matter available.
