(coming to the front of the stage with a large hasbet of envelopes and folded circulars. She puts the circulars hurriedly into the envelopes). Goodness! I Should have done this before. There ought to be an assistant secretary anyway. What time is it P One o clock P And the mail goes at quarter past. And there is that directors meeting at two. I don t see why Clara could not have stayed and helped me instead of ?ying off to the station with mother and father. I don t care if mother did go off to avoid the reception. I really didn t think she would go, though, because she was so worried for fear I shouldn t do everything exactly right. If I can t run this house for two days, even with a reception, my course in domestic science hasn t done me much good. (enter molly.) Well, Molly, what is it?
