The powerful global warming gases like the hydrofluorocarbons should be reduced according to various European governments . In fact, the European Commission have recommended the European inhabitants to avoid using HFCs in refrigerators and air-conditioners since the Earth planet is getting more warmer day by day. Officials have voiced out that they are going to closely monitor the use and abuse of the HFCs and they expecting to cut one fifth of actual use between 2015 and 2030. Strategies and plans have already been set up there are multiple appliances which contain HFCs are going to be banned and replaced by other alternatives. However, from an economic perspective, analysts have underlined that the bans will prove to be too costly while reducing competitiveness without significant benefits in reducing emissions. 120 pp. Englisch.
