Forgotten Books, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from A Century of Empire, 1801-1900, Vol. 1 of 3: 1801-1832 In the whole British chronicle, then, no span of one hundred years seems more clearly marked out as a definite political and social era than the Nineteenth Century; yet would no task be more surely futile than an attempt to follow its history except as part of what had gone before. That has been dug into, shovelled into heaps, the very foundations laid bare; there is scarcely an open act or secret motive of our dead rulers that has not been annotated, connotated, scrutinised, from every view-point, exposed in printed correspondence, much also still unprinted, staggering to survey. No human being of ordinary circumstances can draw understanding from such a multitudinous source. He may behold, indeed, this vast Sahara of information, this boundless contiguity of research, not likely to dwindle, rather to widen with the ages; but having his own garden, little or large, to cultivate, what knowledge comes to him must be laid at its very pale, and in manageable supply, else he will have none of it. Can this be done, he will be so much the wiser - will even be the better gardener for it; nor are there lacking among his fellows those willing to work for him thus. It is no dullard's work to follow a clue through the legion manu scripts and private memoirs to which latter-day diligence has given access. In these, truth, elsewhere unattainable, certainly awaits a finder; but in matters historical we Britons have worn so long the coloured spectacles of Party, that the puzzle is to transmit a pure ray without sacrifice of Sparkle.
