Excerpt from A Plea for the Sabbath-School System: Delivered Feb, 2, 1830, at the Anniversary of the Gettysburg Sunday School When we inquire, how did a ministry, which had he come corrupt, fail to lose its influence over the community, we find, that, either ignorance and superstition among the people, or an unholy union of civil and ecclesiastical power dependently of these auxiliaries, exert but little influence over an enlightened, virtuous people, is almost a self-evident truth. But the experiment could never be made. Such is the reciprocal influence, which the clergy and laity exert up on one another, that within certain limits, their characters run parallel to each other and even when changing for better or worse, they will as a whole, never be found occupying contrary extremes. Piety among the members of the church, tends to preserve and elevate the piety of their minister. Their prayers strengthen him, their admonitions stimulate him, their high expectations prevent his standard of duty from sinking low. Amid a worldly people, the whole current of influence is reversed. In his intercourse with them,...
